How are performance outcomes determined?
Talent outcomes (as well as other talent decisions) are discussed and decided through talent discussions. Your talent lead, Pravin Gorlewar, facilitates the discussion and is accountable for determining your talent outcome (and other talent decisions), based on your priorities and self-reflections and input from others, including feedback from your people lead, priority reviewer reflections, anytime feedback, recognition, and client account input (as applicable). Your overall impact, behaviors, and skills are considered when determining your performance and rewards outcomes. Your group lead, Kanhai Arora, also reviews overall outcomes. Explore the Performance and Rewards Hub to learn more about priorities, reflections, talent discussions, and rewards decisions.

Base Pay

Approach

How are base pay decisions made?

June is our primary cycle for promotions and base pay increases. Your base pay range is determined by your job, level, and location using market insights, including what our competitors pay people in similar jobs, levels and locations. Then, within that range, your talent lead and group lead personalize your base pay based on your skills and performance, while aligning to business and talent needs. Watch this video for more information on base pay.

Bonus and equity decisions for those eligible will continue to be made in the December cycle.

For more information and additional context, visit the FY26 June Cycle Rewards and Performance FAQs.

One Time Lump Sum

Approach

You received a one-time lump sum payment, which will be paid on June 30, 2026.

Additional Context:

For this June cycle, one-time lump sums give our Reinventors more immediate cash - something we know people value - while still helping us manage overall payroll in the current macro environment.
